Thos. H. Williams, President of the California Jockey club, is expected here by the Doric, June 4, from San Francisco en route to China. Wm. G. Irwin and W. H. Conwell will try to persuade him to stay over for the races and go on by the China of the 15th of June.

Faking War News.

Fakedispatches are the rule on the bulletin boards of the San Francisco dailies. A passenger by the Gaelic takes them off by saying that just before he left one of the papers had it that the Holland torpedo boat had dived under the Isthmus of Panama and gone to join Dewey's fleet in Manila. Another, that the Spanish fleet had sailed up the Mississippi and bombarded Salt Lake city.

COURT OF INQUIRY.

Reviewing the Court Martial's Judgment Against Captain Good.

The Court of Inquiry convened by President Dole, to hear and pass upon newly discovered evidence in the case of John Good, met at the Bungalow last evening.

The court consists of Capt. W. A. Kinney, Major J. W. Jones, Col. McLeod and Capt. L. T. Kenake. A. G. M. Robertson and Alfred S. Hartwell are appearing for Good. The petition of Good, asking permission of President Dole to have a Court of Inquiry convened and the case reopened, was read. Also, the order of the President appointing the officers who were to serve.

The charge, consisting of seven counts, on which Good was found guilty, was gone over by Mr. Robertson. The attorney then gave an outline of the case and with the newly discovered evidence will endeavor to prove that the sights were not taken off the guns by or with the knowledge of Good. That they were displaced by Rhodes, at that time in the Government employ as a detective.

Col. J. H. Soper was the first witness called. Examined by Gen. Hartwell. Rhodes was enlisted in Co. E, not for military service but for special work. He was enlisted by order of President Dole. Rhodes went to Soper's house and said that he (Rhodes) had taken the sight. Good knew nothing about it.

Judge advocate Kinney then took the witness. In reply to questions Col. Soper said Rhodes was known to be familiar with artillery. He never considered that Rhodes was subject to orders other than those of President Dole. He was given charge of a gun at Diamond Head in the 1895 affair.

General Hartwell questioning elicited the reply that Rhodes was detailed for special duty.

J. W. Short was called. At the time of the trouble he was in the National Guard. Up to April 1, 1897, had served three years.

Was private and corporal in Co. E; transferred to Co. D, and served as sergeant; remembered the cholera epidemic and Capt. Good's arrest and subsequent court martial; was not a witness at the trial; had the gun from which the sight was alleged to have been taken and seen it was there; did not say anything about it at the time because he did not want to mix up in the trouble and nobody asked him if he knew; had told his roommate about the sight at the time; his former roommate is not now here.

J. W. Sprout—Was a member of the squad that Short was in; they were ordered to clean the guns; was not sure as to dates; remembered seeing the sight in the gun as it was being cleaned.

President Dole was questioned and his evidence was substantially the same as Col. Soper's.

The arrival of the Gaelic caused Capt. L. T. Kenake to absent himself from the court and Mr. Robertson asked that the rest of the testimony be taken by the full court. Request granted. Case will go on again this evening at 7:30.

"NEXT STEAMER."

The Senate Will Pass Joint Resolution If the House Does.

Washington, May 6.—"There is a pronounced majority in the Senate in favor of annexing the Hawaiian islands," remarked Senator Money this morning, "and if the House passes the joint resolution annexing the islands next week, it will go through the Senate, in my judgment, without undue delay. The fact is, you know, the Hawaiian treaty only lacks two or three votes of the necessary two-thirds. A joint resolution, however, will have the same effect as the treaty and only requires a majority vote, which it will easily get."

Editor Nesfield Dead.

David W. C. Nesfield, who was editor of the Daily Hawaiian, Honolulu, in 1884, died at Fresno, Cal., May 6. He was 54 years of age. Mr. Nesfield was an elegant writer and a chivalrous opponent in controversy, besides being exceedingly genial in fraternization with confreres of the press.
